CMLAN feedback to SUN Survey

CMLAN members participated in and collectively gave feedback on Novartis SUN Survey

- Survey of Unmet Needs in chronic myeloid leukemia (CML SUN) data shows a greater need for the patient voice during treatment discussions that balance quality of life (QoL), efficacy, and tolerability goals across all lines of therapy
- Data reveal necessity for greater communication and shared decision-making between patients and physicians, as well as more tolerable therapy options that do not sacrifice QoL for efficacy
- CML SUN highlights an opportunity for physicians, patients, and other stakeholders to collaborate and better meet expectations for CML

"People living with chronic myeloid leukemia must be able to have open and honest conversations with their doctors about their treatment goals, how medication side effects impact their lives, as well as their emotional and mental well-being,"

Lisa Machado, CML SUN Steering Committee member, founder of the Canadian CML Network and executive producer of Healthing.ca

2nd Academic Community Advisory Board

During EHA in Frankfurt June 2023

Meeting of 16 CAB members and 9 CML academic researchers

- What is the researchers' approach and contribution towards CML cure beyond TFR?
- O Do they understand the needs and expectations of patients?
- What are the barriers to move research forward?
- O How can the patient community and researchers support each other and collaborate?

2nd Academic CML-CAB

Next Steps

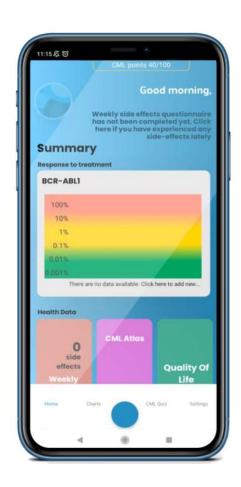

Taken from the discussions in the meeting

- Oldentifying candidates for targets and mechanisms/looking more closely at translational research/bench to bedside.
- Oldentifying the right patient populations for research and cure, (e.g., multi-resistant or multi-intolerant patients; patients with needs in underserved countries with no clinical trials).
- Identifying funding/funders, perhaps get involved with philanthropic funders.
- Oldentifying and creating incentives: for researchers and for pharmaceutical companies.
- O Building a research platform with pragmatic trials, basket trials, platform trials.
- O Enabling data sharing whilst addressing data protection and drawing conclusions from data that are already available.
- O There is a need for a bone marrow (CML and other blood cancers) global research biobank which does not exist today.
